WELCOME LETTER

You can't be human all by yourself, and when you have this quality—UBUNTU—you are known for your generosity. We think of ourselves far too frequently as just individuals, separated from one another, whereas you are connected and what you do affects the whole world. —Desmond Tutu

Dear Writers, Creators, Composers, Dreamers, Poets, Visionaries, & Mavericks,

I am because we are. I can be me because of who we are together, and you matter to the writing communities of Connecticut.

Welcome to Writing Our Lives – Digital Ubuntu: We, Too, Are Connecticut! Be proud of yourself—who you are in relation to the person sitting next to you, to the individual on the other side of the room, and to those who couldn't be with you today to celebrate your accomplishments. To allude Matt de la Peña's novel, "We are here right now," and together we are stronger.

Today's event is possible because several teachers participating in an Invitational Summer Institute through the Connecticut Writing Project at Fairfield University wanted more for their classrooms. They believe that students are more than test scores and that they deserve outlets to reimagine traditional classrooms as boundary free. So they designed writing workshops to promote ethnography, ten-minute plays, TedTalks, blogging, digital storytelling, and websites. Then they applied to the John Legend Show Me Campaign, National Writing Project, and John D. and Catherine T. MacArthur Foundation, saying, "We can be us, digitally, because of how we compose together with 21st century tools."

Today is the culmination of a yearlong, inter-district collaboration that brought together more than 100 students from diverse backgrounds and perspectives to exchange knowledge about composing in digital spaces. Each one of you has contributed to this effort, and today we celebrate all of us as a community. We are here. We are Connecticut. And as collaborators, we deserve a standing ovation, a few finger snaps, and perennial seeds for Writing Our Lives in the future.

Today, I encourage you to get to know one another and to ask questions about each others' experiences at your respective schools. More importantly, however, I want you to recognize that you are innovators of tomorrow and "You gotta write! A'ight?"

You have already written, and today's history is being written about you.

Thank you for your participation, contributions, and excellence. This day wouldn't be possible without you.

COOPERATING SCHOOLS

BASSICK HIGH SCHOOL

Located in Bridgeport, Bassick High School was the recipient of a 2012-2013 NWP grant for building writing excellence. It has an enrollment of 1100 youth, and last year students published One Camera and a Neighborhood under the leadership of Kathy Silver, now principal of the 9th grade academy. Kate led a digital ethnography project this year with 9th grade students to continue the promotion of student perspectives in Bridgeport.

CENTER FOR GLOBAL STUDIES

Located in Norwalk, the Center for Global Studies is an inter-district magnet school with a focus on international studies and is housed in Brien McMahon High School. It's home to the Senators and approximately 280 students. Paula has been using blogs to enhance classroom curriculum since 2013 and spent this year working with students to digitally compose youth perspectives for the 21st century.

CENTRAL HIGH SCHOOL

Central High School in Bridgeport is one of the state's most culturally diverse schools and has an enrollment of 2,200 students. Shaun, a Beard Teacher of the Year, is a digital master for CWP-Fairfield and a proud director of the Young Playwright Festival, which is hosted at the school. For this project, they turned to radio. Shaun is a strong proponent of listening to young people and bringing their voices to the forefront.

COOPERATING SCHOOLS

DARIEN HIGH SCHOOL

Darien High School has an enrollment of 1,149 youth. The school is known for its championship-winning athletic teams and its commitment to the National Writing Project. Jennifer led a team of English teachers to promote online, digital composition, including examining how young people can leave an ethical footprint with their composing. She and her students worked with multiple platforms to bring their perspectives to today's conference.

JOEL BARLOW HIGH SCHOOL

Redding's Joel Barlow High School is known for its phenomenal writing center. Each year, the school opens its doors to educators from around the state to score students' writing portfolios. Megan teaches several courses at the school and worked in collaboration with Kim Herzog and Robert Galinsky to lead the students enrolled in her public speaking class. She represented CWP-Fairfield at a NY Fashion Week event hosted by John Legend, a funder of today's conference.

STAPLES HIGH SCHOOL

Located in Westport, Staples High School was named by the Wall Street Journal as one of the best high schools in the nation and by Connecticut Magazine as one of the best high schools in the state. It enrolls 1,800 youth. The school prides itself on academic achievement, a curriculum geared to college readiness, and a commitment to literacy. Kim worked with her students to develop TEDx projects and collaborated with Megan Zabilinsky and Robert Galinsky.
